TELLER BLAMES BANKING SYSTEM

RECENT FINANCIAL PANIC IS DISCUSSED IN SENATE.

MONEY DISTRIBUTION UNFAIR?

SENATOR STONE CRITICISES TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

TAWNEY ISSUES A WARNING

Says Country Faces Deficit of $100,000,000 Unless Estimates for Next Fiscal Year Are Cut Down—Brownson Incident Discussed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Senator Stone, of Missouri, today presented statistics of government deposits in national banks to show that the distribution of money during the recent currency stringency was not "equitable" as contemplated by the law governing the treasury department. He declared that the west and south were discriminated against while New York and Boston were favored.

Mr. Stone declared that the treasury department had in three months placed $17,000,000 in the banks of New York.

SENATOR H. M. TELLER.

"in order that they might lose it out," said St. Louis bankers had told him that while their money was out of reach in the New York banks, they had gone to that city and had bought currency there, paying from 1½ to 2 per cent for it.

"Three per cent was paid," declared Senator Teller.

Teller Talks on Panic.

Senator Teller upon the conclusion of Mr. Stone's speech, said he believed the recent financial trouble had resulted from the banking system of the country and had not grown out of the administration of law.

"It is possible," he said, "that the treasury department did not distribute the money in proportion either to the banking capital or of population, but there was one storm center of the whole trouble. We did not need any money in the west. Colorado did not need money, although it is stated that Colorado banks had $11,000,000 in New York banks.

"In my judgment, the Colorado senator declared, "the secretary of the treasury could not have served the country better than by putting the money in New York city. There were 12 or 15 trust companies there that were in condition to go to the wall. They needed the money. The banks came to their relief. If they had failed, there would have been a failure of banks practically all over the country. The people in the west had as much interest in maintaining the integrity of these trusts as the people in New York.

An Age of Criticism.

"This is the age of criticism of people who have money. They have been charged with having brought on this panic. Some of the rich men of this country who have been paraded in the magazines as people inordinately rich put up practically their entire capital to tide over possibly a panic. Any man put up $1,000,000. Some of these rich men could have made a great deal of money by letting the banks fail."

The Senate then proceeded to consider the criminal code bill, and at 4:15 p. m. adjourned until Monday.

Cost of Submarines.

In response to a resolution introduced by Senator Ankeny and passed by the Senate, the secretary of the navy today transmitted to the Senate a letter giving the cost of the submarine torpedo boats Plunger and Grampus on the Pacific coast. He said that, under a red of contract, the navy had offered $19-ton submarine for $175,000. MILD PANIC AMONG SHOPPERS

Marchers Darted Into Crowd, and Many Women Were Knocked Off Their Feet—Dr. B. L. Reitman, Socialist, Instigated the March.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—An attempt of Socialists to bring about a "march of the unemployed" through the downtown streets today resulted in two sharp fights with the police, in which the would-be marchers were routed after a number of men had been clubbed. Dr. Benjamin L. Reitman, the originator of the plan to march through the streets, and two of his followers, were arrested.

For several days, Reitman, who is a Socialist, had been making announcements of his intention to hold a parade of "hobos" and "unemployed," despite the warning given by Chief of Police Shippy that no march through the streets would be permitted. Reitman continued to defy the authorities, and last night thousands of circulars were distributed throughout the down-town schools and in the lodging house district, calling upon all men out of work to assemble at 2 o'clock on the lake front.

Crowd Gathered on Michigan Ave.

A little before 2 o'clock a crowd commenced to gather on Michigan avenue in front of the Art institute, and in a few minutes a column, which was really a series of columns of four and five men abreast, formed and, headed by Reitman, they started west on Adams street. The marchers probably did not number more than 200 at any time, but many hundreds of people followed and added to the confusion.

After marching a block west on Adams street, Reitman countermarched to Michigan avenue, passed north to Madison street, and then went west two squares to Madison street.

He encountered a strong squad of police under the command of Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler, who, after a command to disband had been disregarded, ordered his men to charge the marchers. The police came on at the run, and the column was instantly broken up. Several men were knocked down, and the police, not attempting to make arrests, used their clubs freely in quickening the footsteps of the fleeing "unemployed."

Shoppers Knocked Off Their Feet.

Followed closely by the police, the marchers darted into the crowd of shoppers along State street, and several women were pushed to the sidewalk during the confusion.

A number of the marchers, after getting away from the police, went south on State street, attempting to form another column as they went.

At State street and Jackson boulevard, they had formed the semblance of another parade, and, taking the middle of the boulevard, they marched along six abreast. Just before reach-

THREE FIREMEN KILLED

CAUGHT BY FALLING WALL AT BALTIMORE FIRE.

Ten Others Are Badly Injured, Including Chief Horton.—Strong Wind Fans Blaze.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 23.—Three firemen were killed and 10 injured, and $50,000 worth of property destroyed in a fire at Holliday and Saratoga streets early this morning. George Horton, chief of the fire department, is among the injured.

The dead:

LIEUTENANT FRED. HARMAN.

WILLIAM B. PUGH.

An unidentified man.

The fire broke out a short time after midnight in the upper part of the building occupied by the firm of J. Hagerty & Sons, at the southeast corner of Holliday and Saratoga streets. The first alarm was followed by a general one, calling out all the apparatus in the city. Then, by a high wind from the northwest, the fire spread rapidly and in an incredibly short time the north wall of the building fell into narrow Saratoga street, crushing the firemen.

A four-story building to the east soon caught fire and burned fiercely.

PLOT NIPPED IN BUD

ATTEMPT TO OVERTHROW MONARCHY OF PORTUGAL.

Prompt Action of Government Prevents Conspiracy, Being Carried Out by Republicans.

LISBON, Jan. 23.—(By Courier to Bayonne, Spain, Jan. 23.)—An abortive attempt to overthrow the monarchy and proclaim Portugal a republic was nipped in the bud last night by the prompt action of the government. The plot was organized by a small group of advanced Republicans.

The conspirators intended to take advantage of various festivities to carry out the coup d'etat. The royal family were at Villa Viosa, entertaining the Duke of Abruzzi. Most of the army and navy officers, who were to the city, were attending a gala performance at the theater.

The police discovered what was in the wind early in the evening and surrounded a house where the ringleaders in the plot were conferring. When they broke in the door, the lights were extinguished and in the confusion that followed most of the conspirators managed to escape. Several of them were captured, however, including the leader, Joao Chagas, a Republican journalist who was prominent in the Republican revolt of 1891; Franco Borges, editor of the Mundo, and a merchant named Gerendella. Cases of revolvers and bombs were found in the cellar.

A general alarm was immediately sent out, and while the prisoners were being taken to jail, troops began to appear from all directions.

A squadron of cavalry was placed around Premier Franco's house and the night passed without further incident.

BALL TEAM ASSURED

COLORADO SPRINGS GETS IN STATE LEAGUE.

Promoters to Hold First Meeting Here Soon—Now Considering Sites for New Park.

Colorado Springs is to have a team in the Colorado State Baseball league. This was the definite assurance given H. H. Hahn of this city, one promoters of the league, at a conference in Denver yesterday. The initial meeting for the consideration of plans for the league and the taking of definite steps toward its organization, is to be held in this city about the first of February.

The promoters further assured Colorado Springs men interested that the city would not be called upon to put up a bonus; that the league is to be carried on strictly as a business proposition and that all that is expected is the patronage of the fans. A first-class team that will be in the fight from start to finish is promised the city.

The league, as now proposed, will be composed of Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Trinidad, and probably Cripple Creek. It is the plan to play, during the first season, games only on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. If the proposition proves a success, it is expected that the league will [illegible] next year, a [illegible] league of Class C [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] tion, with a regular [illegible] schedule.

North of the city and on the line to Manitou are the points that are being given the most favorable consideration, as it is understood that the site of the old Western league park at Lowell is not likely to be selected.

Efforts to secure a Western league franchise, which have been made by Mr. Hahn and others for the last six months, have come to naught, and the chances are considered very small.

TAFT IS CONSIDERATE

WON'T WORK IN OPPOSITION TO OTHER CANDIDATES.

Instructs His Friends in New York How to Act.—Will Not Embarrass Hughes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Secretary of War Taft is carrying out his policy in New York that he has directed his partisans to follow in other states where there are candidates for the Republican nomination for the presidency. In a letter to Representative Herbert Parsons, chairman of the Republican county committee of New York, the secretary makes it clear that he does not want his friends to prosecute a campaign in New York against Governor Hughes. The letter, which was made public by Representative Parsons tonight, follows:

"My Dear Parsons: I am aware that you and many other friends of mine in New York state, who are also friends of Governor Hughes, have hesitated as to the course to pursue in respect to the Republican nomination for the presidency. I wish you and them to know that, as far as I am concerned, there should be no embarrassment in this regard. I have uniformly urged friends of mine not to attempt to divide in my interest the delegation from any state which has a candidate of its own. Since Governor Hughes has indicated his willingness to accept the Republican nomination, I now make the same request of you and my other friends in your state. Moreover, I would greatly deprecate a contest which might imperil Republican victory in New York in November. Anything that I can do to avoid this I am anxious to do.

Very sincerely yours,

(Signed) WILLIAM H. TAFT.

160 ACRES NOT ENOUGH

DRY FARMERS REQUIRE 320 FOR LIVELIHOOD.

Bill of Senator Smoot Unanimously Indorsed at Salt Lake—Brooks of Wyoming, President.

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 23.—There were 382 registered delegates in attendance at the Transmissouri Dry Farming congress today, and 382 votes were cast for the new president, Governor E. D. Brooks of Wyoming. Nominations were made by a committee, and there were no contests.

Speculation as to the next meeting place will afford entertainment until the eleventh hour of the convention, when the legislative committee will make known its choice.

Cheyenne, Wheatlands, Aline and Idaho Falls, Ida., are urgent in their invitations to the congress. A resolution requiring the next meeting place to guarantee transportation of the convention was submitted this afternoon, and it is now in the hands of the committee on resolutions.

In the midst of the addresses this afternoon a discussion arose as to the comparative merit of rotating crops on dry farms and allowing the soil to lie fallow on alternate years. It was provoked by the suggestion of Professor W. M. Jardine, a government expert, that experiments might be shown in the planting of crops to more useful in conserving moisture than the fallowing of the land.

Several speakers said emphatically that the legal homestead of 160 acres was not large enough to afford a livelihood in the dry regions, because of the lesser production in the area and the necessity for surrounding cultivation at intervals. The congress showed its acceptance of this view by unanimous-

SHOOTS SELF ON TRAIN

SALESMAN WELL KNOWN HERE SUICIDES IN PULLMAN.

Frank X. Thaler, in Fit of Melancholy Over Illness, Takes Life Near Castle Rock.

In a fit of melancholy resulting from protracted ill health, Frank X. Thaler, a traveling salesman for the Fritz Thien Mercantile company of Denver, yesterday morning at 7 o'clock shot and killed himself on Denver and Rio Grande train No. 18, between Colorado Springs and Denver.

Shortly after leaving this city, Thaler complained to the Pullman porter of being ill, saying that he had slept little during the night. Between Douglas and Castle Rock, he entered the toilet room for a fourth time. A few minutes later the porter heard a shot and notified the conductor. Thaler's body being wedged against the door, the train was stopped and entrance was effected through a window. He was dead when the conductor and others reached him, and it is thought he did himself by putting the muzzle of the gun in his mouth.

JEROME'S PLAN STILL A SECRET

METHOD OF COMBATING EXPERTS IN DOUBT.

ALIENISTS BEGIN TESTIMONY

THAW HEARING SHOULD END NEXT WEEK.

EXCELLENT PROGRESS MADE

Witnesses From Europe, to Testify for Defense, Expected to Arrive Today—Dr. Bailey, on Stand Declares Thaw Acted Like a Madman.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—When an early adjournment of the Thaw trial was taken today, in order to enable the attorneys for the defense to prepare their long hypothetical question covering all the evidence in the case, there seemed no longer any doubt that next week will bring the second hearing to a close.

No efforts for the state have yet appeared in the court room, and Mr. Jerome has not indicated the manner in which he will combat the testimony of the alienists in the employ of the defense.

Mr. Jerome turned the tables yesterday upon Mr. William Thaw by reading to the jury the affidavits she made a year ago to the lunacy commission, which was testing her son's condition of mind, and the defense may show a startling reversal by having the state's alienists admit upon the stand that they made affidavits a year ago in which they expressed the opinion that Harry Thaw was suffering from incurable paranoia and had been a victim of that mental malady for many years.

Justice Dowling held a conference with all of the attorneys interested in the case, before announcing his decision as to the amount of expert testimony to be placed before the jury. The defense should conclude its evidence tomorrow unless Mr. Jerome extends the examination beyond the limit of his present intention.

Alienists on Stand.

Dr. Charles G. Wagner of Binghamton, N. Y., and Dr. Arthur D. Evans of Morris Plains, N. J., both superintendents of state institutions for the insane, were on the stand today. In detailing their conversations with Thaw in the Tombs, they brought out more clearly two points which were glossed over last year. The first of these was to the effect that Thaw had told them that in 1899 or 1901 he had been a guest of White at a dinner party in the Madison Square Garden tower. He had left early and been accused of breaking up the party. Some of the guests did not eat much, Thaw declared, and the young woman who sat next to him declared he stole water. Thaw also told the physicians of the first time he saw Evelyn Nesbit. It was in 1901, in front of a theater. "A pure-looking girl," he described her. Then he asked who she was. He was told the name was Nesbit and that "she belongs to Stanford White." Thaw managed afterwards to meet the girl at an after-theater supper, in company with several other chorus girls.

The European witnesses, who are yet to be heard for the defense, will arrive

BRYAN WANTS CREDIT

REPUBLICANS HAVE HATCHED DEMOCRATIC EGGS.

Commoner Predicts Victory of His Party Because Democrats, He Declares, Are United.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 23.—Birmingham tendered to William J. Bryan and Judson Harmon a remarkable welcome during their visit to the city today. Mr. Bryan made a public address this morning to a crowd which taxed the capacity of the Bijou theater, and hundreds were turned away.

Mr. Harmon spoke very briefly at the morning meeting, and when he was introduced as the "next vice president," there was the greatest demonstration of the day.

Mr. Bryan, Mr. Harmon and Governor [illegible] spoke at the annual [illegible] the board of trade tonight, in honor of the visitors. Four hundred covers were laid for this affair.

In his speech this morning, Mr. Bryan predicted a Democratic victory this year, and he based his prediction on a united Democratic party and a divided Republican party. The principles of the Democratic platform of the past had been vindicated by their adoption by the Republicans.

"If the Republican party hatches a Democratic egg," he said, "the Democrats are entitled to some of the credit."

Mr. Bryan also said that the doctrine of state rights was as dear to the northern states as it was to the southern states. He praised Governor Comer, Governor Glenn and Senator Smith for the fight they have made for the right of the state to regulate [illegible] and added that it was regard [illegible] federal judge to set aside [illegible]

DICKSON WANTS ANTITRUST LAW

SAYS COLORADO IS FAR BEHIND OTHER STATES.

WILL GO AFTER COAL TRUST

TAKES OFF HAT TO FLOUR TRUST—GREAT, HE SAYS.

PRICES HAVE BEEN BOOSTED

Although Cost to Consumer Is 25 Per Cent Higher Than Five Years Ago He Says Retailer Is Not Getting the Benefit.

That Colorado is behind the majority of the states in the matter of anti-trust legislation was the opinion expressed by Attorney General William H. Dickson in his address to the members of the Grace Church Neighborhood club last evening on the subject of "Trusts." He declared that the state has practically no legislation of this nature, and expressed the hope that the next legislature would see fit to enact just but stringent laws. Mr. Dickson said he is now preparing to restrain the coal trust in this state and will open a campaign soon.

Mr. Dickson spoke on the trust question in general, reviewing in brief its history in this country and discussing the question of federal and state control. He told particularly of the fight he is waging against "unlawful combinations" that are operating in Colorado.

Mr. Dickson said in part:

A Large Question.

"I have been invited to speak on the subject of trusts, which is a large subject to deal with in one evening. It is a question that has been perplexing the national and many of the state governments and when I began studying the question I was surprised to find out how old it was. Two hundred years ago they dealt with trusts in England, only they did not call them trusts, but 'unlawful combinations.'

"An unlawful combination is one to raise prices or limit production. The trusts first became an important matter after the election of President McKinley in 1896, for although before that time there were trusts, they did not assume their full growth until afterwards. The sugar trust and the whisky trust were the first important trusts to be organized after President McKinley's election.

Roosevelt's Good Work.

"As soon as Mr. Roosevelt became president he began his fight on the trusts, but before that time the state governments here and there had taken up the fight, the first effort was made by the attorney general of Ohio against the Standard Oil trust in 1892. President Roosevelt was the first to take up the fight on a large scale. He has done more in that direction than all the preceding presidents, and it is a question if people really appreciate what he has done. There are many people now, not only candidates but many others who, with whom President Roosevelt is not as popular as he was. They hold that he was responsible for the excited public, and perhaps what he has done by showing up the abuses of corporate business has had some effect, but who would not rather have had the panic than to have the corporations continuing in their past course.

Panic Was Worldwide.

"This panic was not confined to the United States, but was general throughout England, Germany and other countries. True, it was not as severe there as in the United States, but that was because the United States is a peculiar country in the production and transportation of its products.

"It is interesting to note that those who are now favoring federal control are the friends of the corporations who feel the popular unrest and know that federal regulation is the only thing which will save the trusts from the wrath of the people."

As a result of combinations among retailers, Mr. Dickson said that the prices of foodstuffs and [illegible] imperceptibly during the last five years until they are now from 25 to 33 1-3 per cent higher than in 1903. It is not the retail grocer but the manufacturer who is the benefit of these higher prices, and the manufacturer is hard to estimate because it is impossible to tell exactly the cost of the [illegible]

Sugar Trust.

"There is no [illegible] tomorrow [illegible] and as a trust [illegible] to it. It is [illegible] trust in this state, and I have [illegible] its in my [illegible] but I will not tell you [illegible] am [illegible] manufacturers [illegible] keep their prices [illegible] get [illegible] to [illegible] lighting. "ANGEL" DENNETT IS DEAD

Man Who Amassed Fortune Through Chain of Lunch Rooms Over Country, Dies Poor.

STOCKTON, Cal., Jan. 23.—Alfred W. Dennett, known as "Angel" Dennett, who amassed a fortune through a chain of lunch rooms in several of the large cities, died today aged 72 years. Although at one time worth more than $500,000, he died poor, a victim of financial enterprises, due to religious enthusiasm. Dennett first came to prominence by establishing a group of restaurants in New York, making them notorious by placing proverbs and scriptural mottoes on the walls. Beginning this business in Boston, on a small scale in 1882, Dennett had a string of restaurants from New York to San Francisco within 14 years. Through unfortunate business investments in gold mines, he failed in 1896. He resumed business and later came to California. In 1901 he failed again, owing $92,000, most of his creditors being missionary societies. Starting anew, he suffered heavy losses in 1905 in Oakland and Los Angeles. As a result of this third failure, his mind was affected. He was placed in an asylum, whence he afterwards was discharged as cured. Since then he had lived in retirement.

DANKS GIVE UP MONEY

Make First Installment of Public Deposit to Treasury.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—New York banks paid over to the government today the first installment of the $10,000,000 of public deposits that Secretary Cortelyou yesterday called on them to surrender, in order to strengthen the treasury's working balance, which now amounts to $11,063,000. The banks of this city now hold $72,027,000 of public deposits, $41,000,000 of which was placed with them during the October disturbances.

This is the second call that the treasury has made since the panic, the banks having paid the government $16,000,000 under the call of four weeks ago.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 23.—Thomas Taggart, chairman of the national Democratic committee, arrived here tonight from Chicago, en route to his home in French Lick Springs.

"I am glad I voted to hold the convention in Denver," he said. "It is a hustling city, with a young, hustling mayor. The new auditorium is now ready for the roof. It will hold 14,000 people.

"We are making special arrangements to entertain the press representatives who go to the convention. They will be able to see and hear distinctly everything that is going on. The best facilities are going to be provided for the newspaper men."

tomorrow morning on the steamer Adriatic, which is expected to dock at 9 a. m.

The court session begins at 10 o'clock, and every effort will be made to have them there at that time, as Mr. Littleton is anxious that their evidence shall be in before he puts his hypothetical question.

Besides Drs. Wagner and Evans, the question will be answered for the defense by Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe of Columbia university, who also appeared at the last trial.

Dr. Bailey First Witness.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Dr. Charles L. Bailey, of Albany, who arrived last night from the Island of Jamaica, was the first witness called in the Thaw trial today. Dr. Bailey had attended Thaw on a New York Central train between Hudson and Albany in April, 1906.

"When I was called in to see him, Thaw was chattering about something like 'Shasta, shasta, shasta, the Pennsylvania runs into the New York Central.' He kept on repeating this for some time. His eyes were bulging and he appeared unsound. I gave him a hypodermic of morphine. When Thaw saw the syringe he said: 'Take away that dirty stuff.' I was very close to him and could not detect the odor of alcohol."

On cross-examination Dr. Bailey said Thaw did not respond to interrogations, but rambled on incoherently. His pulse was about 98.

The non-arrival of the steamer Adriatic upset the plans of the defense somewhat and prevented the calling of several witnesses who are expected from abroad.

Expert Testimony.

Dr. Charles G. Wagner, of Binghamton, N. Y., the alienist who began his testimony yesterday afternoon, succeeded Dr. Bailey on the stand.

District Attorney Jerome and Mr. Littleton had a long argument as to the admissibility of Thaw's statements to Doctors Wagner and Evans in the Tombs following the homicide. Mr. Jerome held that these statements came under the head of self-serving declarations. Justice Dowling finally held that the statements were admissible as the basis for expert opinion formed by the alienists.

Dr. Wagner repeated at great length what Thaw had said. The prisoner told of his efforts to have Stanford White punished by appealing to Anthony Comstock and District Attorney Jerome. He said he had not intended attacking White; that providence took the matter in hand and ended it in its own way. Thaw said he had been followed by a gang of thugs whom White had employed to engage him in a street quarrel and kick him to death.

"Mr. Thaw gave me a history of his life," continued the witness. "He said he never got along very well at school and once thought of being a painter. In traveling abroad he had met some pretty fast people, but had never been a dissipated man or much in company of women. He said he rarely or never drank whisky alone. He always wanted to talk of the wrongs he said Stanford White had done, and he referred to those whom he termed father rich criminals engaged in the same practices. His manner of speech was very rapid and at times incoherent."

Solicitous About Health.

On one of his visits to Thaw Dr. Wagner said the defendant was very solicitous about draughts in the prison and had put a newspaper over the grating in the cell door. Thaw said there were people who hoped he would catch cold and die so the case would never come to trial and Stanford White's acts never would be known.

The witness went at length into the details of the physical examination of the defendant as to tests of reflexes and cranial nerves.

The test was a repetition of that given at the first trial. Thaw's manner under examination was domineering, according to Dr. Wagner, who declared that the manner of a patient under examination had more to do with the forming of an opinion than the examination itself. Thaw passed a good physical test, his reflexes being normal; his pulse however, varied in a remarkable way, running in the space of a minute from 78 to 102 beats and then back again.

"Thaw said it was the 'Monk' Eastman gang that had been employed to follow him." The witness went on, and he said the reason Mr. Jerome had not acted on his complaints about White was that the district attorney thought it the result of jealousy. Thaw said he met White in 1906 and had been invited to one of his parties in the Madison Square Garden tower. He later saw White in front of the New York theater with a handsome girl and was told she was Miss Evelyn and belonged to Stanford White."

"Thaw said he did not see how such a girl could care for White, who had reddish hair and looked like an ape."

Evelyn Feared White.

The testimony as to Thaw's acquaintance with White was new to the case. Thaw also told the alienist that Miss Nesbit, afterwards his wife, would be thrown into a high state of nervousness whenever she saw Stanford White. She would shrink and shrivel up, he declared, until he feared for her health.

Dr. Wagner said that Thaw never spoke of White by name, but always referred to him as "The beast" or the "Blackguard." The witness spent an hour in the description of tests of nerves and sense, all of which he declared were applied to Thaw.

Dr. Wagner next gave a description of illusions, delusions, hallucinations, etc.

After a conference of the attorneys with Justice Dowling as to omitting expert testimony as far as possible, recess was ordered.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Edward Alexander MacDowell, who is recognized as America's foremost composer, died at the Westphalia hospital at 8 o'clock tonight, aged 46 years.

"It's all right for a fellow to indulge in an occasional smile," said the man with the impressionistic nose, "but he shouldn't let it develop into a perpetual grin."

BOMB WRECKS ITALIAN BANK

Institution on Elizabeth Street, New York, Attacked Mysteriously. Money Exposed to View.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—An exploding bomb tonight wrecked the front of an Italian bank building on Elizabeth street, exposing $40,000 in silver and gold which the bankers, Pasquale A. Patie & Son, had piled in the windows as proof of their ability to pay depositors on demand.

The bomb throwers, who were not seen by the banker, were quickly lost in the crowd of several thousand excited Italians who gathered about the wreck, and their motive is a mystery. It was at first believed that robbery had been attempted and the known distress in certain sections of the city lent color to this theory. If robbery was the object, it is believed it was amateurs, who lost courage at the critical moment. Patie, the elder of the bankers, is one of the most prosperous of the Italian bankers of the city.

of dairymen which had published a list of prices and said that the Illinois supreme court has recently held that a combination is guilty of criminal conspiracy upon just such evidence. He said he would not file any information against these dairymen but would write to them and call their attention to the Illinois decision. These people have a right to combine he admitted, but said that they must not combine to keep up prices or trusts. Last summer, he said, the attorney generals of the various states had organized to act together and their judgment was that the country must either have federal control or else co-operation among the states. In Colorado there is no antitrust law, and any action against the trusts must be carried on under the old "common law," which requires time. Thirty-five of the states have antitrust laws and in many of these the attorney generals can proceed quickly, as for instance in Texas where a final injunction was obtained against the International Harvester company one day.

Mr. Dickson expressed the common idea Colorado is away behind in the matter of antitrust legislation and hoped that the next legislature would do something in the matter. He was opposed to extreme or too radical measures but in his opinion the trusts are great evils and something must be done.

U. S. MAIL STEAMBOAT LOST

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 23.—A cable to the Times from Juneau, Alaska, says:

It is feared that the United States mail steamboat Fox has been lost with Captain Ross of Sitka, of Juneau, and Charles McDonnaghy, owner and engineer of the craft. The Fox left Wrangel for Juneau January 11 for Sitka, 50 miles away. In spite of a thorough search, which has been instituted, nothing has been heard of the boat and those who were on board. The steamboat Marion and the "U. S. M." have scouted the coast for miles without finding any information.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 23.—The conflict between the emperor and the duma over the naval program, which entails an expenditure of $300,000,000, is steadily developing in a direction unfavorable to the realization of the emperor's ambitions.

DYSPEPSIA PROOF.

How Any Meal Can Be Thoroughly Enjoyed by Any Stomach.

Men, as a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. Their antagonists turn on the searchlight, and the proof of merit will be in being able to stand the flash.

It was only in this way that Mr. White ever knew that dyspepsia was one of Mr. Black's worst enemies. Sitting face to face at a twenty-four table, he thanked his afflicted friend the bill of fare:

Oyster Cocktail. Stuffed Olives.
Boston Clam Chowder.
Strained Gumbo.
Sirloin Steak with Mushrooms.
Roast Beef Hash.
Boiled Ox Tongue with Sauerkraut.
Lobster a la Newburg.
Baked Pork and Beans.
Combination Crab Salad.
Hot Mince Pie.
Pineapple Fritters.

Mr. White ordered a "little of each." Mr. Dyspepsia Black ordered crackers and a glass of milk. "I had such a big breakfast this morning," he said, "that I'll just take a bite to keep you company." But Mr. White could not be deceived. "I am afraid you can't stand the gleam, Mr. Black. Why don't you say you have dyspepsia and be done with it? You'll always have that hungry look anyhow as long as you have dyspepsia. Now listen. My stomach was in just as bad condition as yours at one time. But now I can eat anything, at any time. For instance, this clam chowder or sirloin steak or even the lobster would be just as welcome to my stomach as your crackers and milk. You don't realize how this dyspepsia business is robbing you of your spirit, of your energy and ability to think quickly. I can't help notice it. You haven't the cheer and sociability you had three months ago. Now I'll tell you what to do," and thereat the cheerful Mr. White took a vial from his pocket and extracted a wee tablet. "There, there is a tablet that contains an ingredient, one grain of which digests 3,000 grains of food. For even the worst dyspeptic it's the only thing that really gives relief. The reason is it relieves the stomach of nearly all the work it has to do, digests everything in the stomach and stimulates the gastric juice. I can't get along without them. They are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them anywhere on earth for 50c a package."

Yes, it is true. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets absolutely stop heartburn, nausea, indigestion, dyspepsia of the worst type, sour stomach, bloaty feeling and all eructations and irritation, and freshen and invigorate the stomach. They cheer you up, and make you get all the good there is in your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

ports of any invading army or secure permanently stationary obstructions.

After expressing his concurrence in the views of the board of construction concerning the cost of submarine boats on Puget sound and Grays harbor, Secretary Metcalf says:

"Responding to the query as to whether, in my opinion, the torpedo boats suggested are necessary for the proper protection of the waters heretofore named, I have to state that this question is one that cannot without difficulty be answered in general terms. Assuming the possibility of war, it would be a gross violation of the first principle of strategy for any nation to send a naval expedition to operate at a great distance from its sources of supply and repair until the main battle fleet of the United States had been secured, since our battle fleet is superior to that of any probable enemy on the Pacific, the theater of war must not be expected to remain on the coast for an indefinite time.

Should Be for General Use.

"The locations provide torpedo boats to be stationed on Puget sound and at Grays harbor, state of Washington. It is most inadvisable that any appropriation be made by Congress for naval vessels to be constructed for exclusive employment in any specific locality, as herein proposed. All naval vessels should be available for service at large, and the power of directing the place and manner of employment should not be restricted.

The speaker laid before the House of Representatives today the response of Secretary of the Navy Metcalf to the resolution introduced by Representative Gill, calling for the correspondence relative to designation of staff officers to naval commands. The correspondence is voluminous and includes Admiral Brownson's letter of resignation and the two letters of the President, condemning that officer for the course he had pursued.

There was also a mass of historical matter, showing the army practice in the matter of hospital ship commands, and including orders issued to the navy department by Secretary Bonaparte, with curious indorsements by French officers, all bearing upon this question.

Converse Opposes Plan.

An interesting paper among the latter is an indorsement by Admiral Converse, chief of the navigation bureau, dated June 4, 1906, upon a proposition originating with the joint board of medical officers of the army and navy, to place hospital ships in command of naval surgeons. In that case, Admiral Converse recommended against the placing of hospital ships in command of medical officers in time of peace, and also against the placing of medical officers in command, even with civilian crews.

Admiral Converse held that it was necessary to discipline and efficiency that the officers and crew of such ships should be subjected to naval laws and regulations, and that the officers in command should be fitted by experience and training to navigate and command a vessel under all conditions of weather and unforeseen contingencies.

The new matter in the correspondence about which Congress particularly desired information, consists of a long memorandum prepared by Admiral Brownson, then chief of the bureau, dated November 18 last, thereby anticipating the admiral's resignation by nearly a month.

Brownson's Opinion.

Admiral Brownson holds that whether hospital ships or not, such vessels as the Relief must accompany a fleet to fulfill their purposes, and to do so must be navigated and handled in the same seamanlike manner which is required of all vessels to assure safety on high seas. It requires just as skillful a navigator to pilot a hospital ship as it does to pilot a man-of-war—the difficulties depending on the internal arrangements of the vessel or the uses to which it may be put. Yet, the surgeon, genteel, says Admiral Brownson, seems to believe that the navigation, safe conduct and general administration of a seagoing vessel, are secondary as regards the responsibility to command. Telegraph operators or cable engineers are not put in command of cable ships, nor postmasters in command of mail steamers.

Admiral Brownson concludes his memorandum by summarizing his objections to the proposed order, in the case of the Relief, as follows:

Summarizes His Views.

First—It is directly contrary to law for the medical officers to exercise military command in any other than his own corps.

Second—Divided responsibility leads to confusion and poor administration.

Third—Experience, both with the Solace, in the Spanish-American war, and with auxiliaries in the Asiatic station, show conclusively that the only organization for the fleet auxiliary is to have a full navy crew and officers.

Fourth—A seagoing ship, to be efficient, must of necessity be commanded by a seagoing officer.

The last chapter in the correspondence, a new one also, is a reply by Surgeon General Rixey to Admiral Brownson's memorandum, under date of January 22. The surgeon general denies that he ever asked that medical officers be intrusted with the navigation of hospital ships. On the contrary, he had asked that the bureau of navigation select a sailing master and crew to navigate the ship, all orders to and from the sailing master to pass through the senior surgeon, who will be in command. The Relief, his army hospital ship, was commanded by a medical officer, and there can be no question, he says, that medical officers are well qualified.

He cites the army transport service commanded by civilians as notably efficient in their administration. Naval medical officers, he points out, met the same resistance from the line in their claim to command hospitals on shore, ever since 1801, when this question was settled in favor of medical officers; this surmising of the bureau in regard to the command in the shore hospitals has been most satisfactory. In conclusion, the surgeon general says:

"It is necessary that the medical officers have authority in their own corps, and further, that medical officers' authority be recognized in all matters of sanitation. Hospital ships should be run according to regulations laid down a year ago by the secretary of the navy, and this should be done in time of peace and tried to satisfaction of the department and country, so that in time of war the medical officers may know where they stand in the care of the thousands who may be intrusted to their care."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The urgent deficiency appropriation bill, occupied the attention of the House today to the exclusion of all other business. A surprise was sprung when Chairman Tawney of the appropriation committee warned the members that the country was confronted with the certainty of a $100,000,000 deficit, unless the estimates for the next fiscal year should be cut down materially.

Mr. Tawney's warning was seized upon by Mr. Underwood (Ala.) as the text for a lengthy discussion of the recent financial depression.

Dissolves Partnership With God.

Mr. Underwood maintained that there were no natural ordinary conditions that produced that depression. The country, he said, was prosperous and there were no exterior causes. It was not an act of God. It was not because of fire, pestilence, or famine, or crop failure, or dearth of money, but because of a lack of confidence. It therefore had been demonstrated, he said, that so far as the Republican party was working for the prosperity of the country, it had dissolved partnership with God, "because all the Almighty has produced in this country has been lavished bountifully upon it and only the Republican party has failed in its part of the partnership."

Method Is Criticised.

The method of making appropriations was criticised by Mr. Keifer (Ohio), who said it was unbusinesslike. He favored increased fortifications and said that if, for instance, Pearl harbor and perhaps Manila were properly fortified, "we would not be talking so much or hearing so much about a foreign war and we would not have had to incur the millions of expense in singing our [illegible] battleships around the Horn to satisfy that we may show that we have [illegible] spirit left for war if war should come."

Consideration of the bill had not been concluded when the House adjourned at 4:40 p. m.

POLICE DEFIED BY UNEMPLOYED

ing Clark street, they were met by another detachment of police under Lieutenants White and Mooney. At other command to disperse met no response, the marchers attempting to shoulder their way along. The police instantly charged, and the marchers fled within some of those taverns into the doorway of the Hotel Leagle club. Reitman turned south on Clark street, but was quickly caught and placed under arrest. He showed some fight, and was handled in vigorous style. His hat was smashed by a blow from a policeman's club, he was knocked down, and his clothing torn. When he regained his feet he shouted "Let me go; let me go. I know the chief of police."

Reitman Complains.

He was taken to headquarters, followed by a crowd of 2,000. After reaching the station, Reitman said:

"I was arrested without cause and was treated brutally. Some policeman hit me over the head with his club. There would have been no disorder if the police had allowed us to march through the streets as we wished to do. All we wanted was to go to the city hall and demand that men out of work be given employment by the city."

Nobody was seriously hurt during the excitement, although a score of sore heads and backs will be felt for some days.

Reitman and two of his followers, who were arrested at the same time as he, were arraigned in court on charges of disorderly conduct and inciting a riot.

INDICTMENT WILL STAND

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—James Treadwell, of the insolvent California Safe Deposit and Trust company, today before Superior Judge H. Dunne asked, through his attorney, that the indictments against him be dismissed because five of the grand jurors who found the indictments were depositors in the bank. It was his argument that a personal feeling entered into their findings and that they had a feeling of malice towards the defendant. The request was denied. The court granted Treadwell twenty days to file a bill of exceptions.

FREIGHTER RUNS ASHORE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—The Norwegian freighter Thodie, Fleetland bound with a full cargo from Adelaide for Grays Harbor, on this coast, is ashore 14 miles north of Sydney, Australia. News of this wreck was received in this city today by the Merchants exchange, together with the information that several tugs have been dispatched to the scene of the wreck. The vessel is lying broadside on the rocks and leaking considerably forward.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The Senate committee on military affairs today agreed upon a favorable report on Senator Warren's bill, increasing the pay of the army.

CHORUS LADY AND WIT

Indiana Humorist Dodges Fairbanks Issue, and Cracks Some Jokes of 1898 Vintage.

From the Baltimore Sun.

Some day when George Ade grows tired of fables he may write "The Fable of the Chorus Lady and the Humorist."

The basis of the story will be his visit to Miss Rose Stahl's dressing room between acts at Ford's opera house last night.

Thus it was:

Ade entering Chorus Lady's dressing room: Ah! Ah! Ah!

Mr. Ade—The third, not the second, is the big act.

Chorus Lady—You like it?

Mr. Ade—Mud.

Manager—Yes, I cry every time I see that third act. Tears run down my cheeks tonight.

Mr. Ade (sarcastically)—That's the way he keeps his job.

Chorus Lady—Isn't he a dear manager?

Mr. Ade (very solemnly)—At any salary.

Chorus Lady—I'd love to play at your home.

Mr. Ade—At my home? Not if I see you first. Oh! ah! excuse me.

Chorus Lady—Goodness! I've got to play in my home town—Trenton—soon. You've got to show me when you go home to the roost; but I've got my fingers crossed.

Mr. Ade—Awful! Been through it myself. Case of "I knew her when—"

Chorus Lady—Yes, mother says if they like "me" what would they think of a real actress.

Mr. Ade (to Chorus Lady)—Related to Jake Stahl?

Chorus Lady—Is he rich.

Mr. Ade—Yes; a ball player.

Chorus Lady—No all my relatives are poor. The only thing big we ever did was to have the biggest funeral in New Jersey.

Manager—Mr. a man outside who says he knows your father. He's a German.

Chorus Lady—There's not a German in the country who would trade dogs without asking father.

Enter negress. Mr. Ade ducks as he stands and strikes the dome of the wings. Boy without calls "curtain, curtain."

All leave Miss Stahl begging Mr. Ade to write her a play. Mr. Ade promises to do so right away.

Moral: A chorus lady helps.

Mr. Ade came to Baltimore to visit Mr. Harris, his little nephew—six feet tall and many pounds heavy. Mr. Ade is four times as tall as his walking stick, and sorry about it. He is stopping at the Belvedere, where he can enter the doors without ducking, and enjoys the slang of Senor Constantine, the Spanish tenor of the San Carlo Opera company. He says he likes the board "rather well, considering, and may write a fable about it.

Asked about his most recent play, "Artie," he smiled.

"'Artie' is sleeping peacefully in his grave, with a white lily right there (pointing to the thirteenth button on his waistcoat). I would have been someone if one of my two plays this year had not failed. I would have had the enjoyable experience of being about the only playwright without a failure to his credit."

In reference to his possible selection as a Fairbanks delegate to the National Republican convention from the Tenth district of Indiana, Mr. Ade declared he knew little about it.

"They probably have it all fixed so that I will be beaten. But, again, there is not a part of my district more than 100 miles from Chicago, and there are just about 10,000 Republicans who will want tickets to the convention from the successful delegate. I guess it's a put-up job.

"Writing plays is the thing. Got a taste of the box receipts and there's nothing else to it. But that final act before the first night—awful. They say I make a bully curtain speech. I may, but I never heard one of them. It always sounds as if someone in the audience were doing the talking.

"The critics usually say, 'Ade stumbled into the footlights and stammered—something.'"

MORE TELEPHONE WONDERS

From the New York Times.

Following out the line of telephone research instituted by the two young St. Louis women who discovered that you can telephone through your head, feet, chest or other convenient sections of your anatomy, Manhattan continued its scientific investigations yesterday. Again the girl operators in the branch exchanges were informed from Manhattan, the Bronx, Kings, and Queens, that the subscriber was talking through his chest.

That was the early morning development. A little later in the day a girl in the Beekman exchange was informed that a voice talking from Jersey City came from the talker's chest. Then the nearby suburbs came in. Mamaroneck, New Rochelle, Yonkers, White Plains, Larchmont, and other commuting centers were heard from. One man in Bellport, on Long Island, professed to be talking through his arm. This the operator refused to believe. The suburbanites were a day later in their use of the discovery than the people of Manhattan, who had talked through their anatomy on Monday. So the girls in the exchange had nothing but scorn for them.

"My! but you people are a long way behind even Harlem," was the usual retort given to the suburbs.

After the suburbs were heard from a little long-distance chest work was done between this center, Pittsburg, and Boston. Chicago tried it, and failed, but in an office operating a leased wire to Pittsburg the experiment of telephoning through the chest was successful.

But the great feature of the day was the discovery by one excessively disconcerted person that even if you put your hand over the transmitter and then call the man at the other end of the line a liar you can't be sure he hasn't heard you. It came about in this way:

The two men concerned were haggling over a bit of real estate. The man at the other end of the wire had said that he wouldn't sell for less than $15,000. The man who was trying to buy the property put his hand over the receiver and, turning to his client, sitting close by, remarked in his hearty voice:

"What a blankety-blank liar that fellow is! I happen to know that he offered the property to a man for $10,000 last week. Now, we'll give him that for it."

The next bid made was $8,000, but with the private information that he had obtained over the telephone, the other man stood out until he got his $10,000, which he admitted afterward was more than he expected to get.

The buyer has determined that for the future he will never swear at anyone trusting to his hand to conceal the act.

A GHASTLY HOMICIDE RECORD.

THE Charleston News and Courier prints a letter from Mr Louis Bristow of Williamston, S. C., in which he gives what he claims is an accurate record of the homicides committed in South Carolina in the six months from July 1 to December 31 1907. The showing is positively appalling. According to this writer 138 persons were murdered in the state during the period named, or almost one for each day.

In South Carolina the negroes outnumber the whites—according to the census of 1900 the proportion was 782,321 to 557,807—and as in all Southern states the race problem is a source of much conflict, so it might be supposed that by far the greater number of these homicides would be the work of the blacks. But this is not the case. Of the victims exactly one half were whites and the other half blacks, and of the slayers 70 were whites, 58 blacks and three unknown. Thus the negroes are responsible for just about their share of the homicides, according to their proportion of the total population.

No wonder the News and Courier declares that "the sin of the South, the sin of South Carolina, is blood-guiltiness. This state is stained with blood from the mountains to the sea. And remarking on the opposition that has been expressed to the encouragement of Italian and Sicilian immigration on the supposed ground of the proneness of those peoples to deeds of violence, it adds: "Your Sicilian would not have half a chance among us, as the records would seem to show." This certainly is plain home talk, but the showing justifies it.

A RECORD WRITTEN IN BLOOD

We have no figures at hand giving the homicide records of the other states, but it is doubtful whether any of them is much worse, if any, than South Carolina. Think of it—a state with a million and a quarter people and somebody murdered almost every day in the year! The Colorado record isn't anything in comparison—and Colorado has far more homicides than is creditable to its good name.

Mr Bristow, the writer of the letter referred to, places the responsibility for this ghastly list on the lack of proper laws and the non-enforcement of such laws as exist, and he gets at the crux of the whole question of homicide in this country—South Carolina and elsewhere—when he says:

"I venture the assertion that had the 138 persons who killed their fellow men during the last half of last year known positively the penalty for homicide was certainly two, possibly fifty, years' imprisonment, not one-fourth of the number of homicides would have occurred in the state."

If it could be made an absolute certainty that every man who deliberately takes the life of another must pay the penalty with his own life or by a term of at least twenty years' imprisonment, the United States would soon exchange its position as the most murderous of civilized nations for that of the most law-abiding.

"DEMONSTRATIONS" OF THE UNEMPLOYED.

THE dispatch from Chicago telling of the "demonstration" made in Chicago yesterday by two or three hundred unemployed men is a reminder of the days of 93. But conditions now are as different from what they were then as day is different from night. The hard times then were genuine, they rested on a substantial foundation of crop failures, dwindling exports, diminished home consumption, unsettled monetary conditions and various other essentials which are conspicuously absent now. The unemployed in Chicago, the great labor center of the West—numbered hundreds of thousands, and though there was the usual proportion of men who remained idle from choice, by far the larger number were out of work simply because there was no work for them, either in Chicago or anywhere else.

Even in the most prosperous times such as we have had for several years, times when every industry in the land is crying for more men, the police of Chicago figure on having about 50,000 loafers in the city during the winter. These are men who either will not work at all or work only at odd times. Many of them are professional tramps. Reports early in the season declared that this number had been doubled, and that there were then 100,000 unemployed in the city, but recent renewed activity in industrial circles has probably reduced this total considerably. Of course by no means all of these men belong in Chicago—in fact, only a few of them live there. The greater part of them drift in from cities and towns all over the middle West, preferring to take their chances in the big city rather than remain at home idle. Nevada being this fact, the reports of vast numbers of unemployed in that city are less significant than they would otherwise be.

There appears to have been no reason or excuse for yesterday's "demonstration." Usually those who take part in such affairs are plain men who don't work if they had the chance, [illegible] the state in [illegible] for [illegible] could [illegible] marching [illegible] to any other place unless [illegible] knew that work would be provided for them there and of course they knew that nothing of the kind would happen. The man who takes part in such a demonstration is likely to find that all he gets for his trouble is a sore spot formed by forcible contact with the hard end of a policeman's club.

The action of the local carpenters union in withdrawing its demand for an increase of wages from 50 to 60 cents an hour is most commendable. This demand was decided upon last October and was to become effective April 1, or at about the time when under normal conditions the building activity of the year would begin. If insisted upon it certainly would have resulted in a very considerable decrease in the amount of building and as this would have lessened the employment for carpenters it is doubtful if they would have derived any benefit from it. The cost of material and labor is already so high that building enterprises are held in check and the industry could hardly have stood an additional increase.

BRAZILIAN FRIENDLINESS

From the New York Times.

The kindly reception of our fleet at Rio de Janeiro, the courteous address of President Penna, the selection of this moment for the announcement of the reduction of import duties upon important products of the soil and industry of our country are manifestations of friendliness which we have and appreciated. The two republics are working out on the northern and southern continents of America, times of substantially the same nature, by institutions and ideals similar in principle.

PUTTING FAITH UP

From the New York Journal of Commerce.

The stock market recovery has already been little short of phenomenal. Everything which sold off in the panic is now selling at 10% while the average recovery has been fully 15 points. This has certainly not been brought about by public investment, until yesterday it was the unanimous verdict of commission houses that their customers were doing little or nothing. This fact of course is no analysis of the character of the buying that has accomplished such remarkable results. The best opinion is that the most powerful interests in the financial world have actively co-operated in marking up prices in order to create a market on which to liquidate at a generous profit. There were unmistakable evidences yesterday that securities were being unloaded by insiders under cover of strength, stimulated by the improvement in the money market.

TAX ON CULTURE.

From the New York Tribune.

With another Congress getting to work there arises once more that inevitable question about the propriety of imposing a heavy duty on imported works of art. Although nearly everybody interested in the creation, sale or collection of art objects agrees that the tariff schedules affecting them are needless, harmful and discreditable, Congress has never listened to reason on the subject. Perhaps this unresponsiveness is due to the supposed slight importance of the matter in comparison with many problems with which the congressional mind has to wrestle. But we fear that two misconceptions have hindered the reform far more than its superficial trivality. Members of Congress may fancy that the duty-free importation of works of art would deal a death blow to the American infant industries of painting and sculpture, and that for the protection of struggling native artists therefore the tariff should be maintained. The other misconception finds utterance in the theory that art objects should be subject to a duty because they are luxuries like diamonds and automobiles. Year in and year out American artists have been exposing the weakness of both these errors, and 176 charge presidents of countless civic societies and a country-wide American Free Art League are all combining to expose the duties.

NEVADA ON TRIAL.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

That a grave blunder was made when the sparsely settled mining camp of Nevada was admitted as a state is now generally recognized. But the blunder can not now be corrected. The state can not be relegated to a territorial status, and the state government, however feeble and inefficient, must be left to exercise its functions as best it can. Not even the feeblest state can be allowed to lean upon the federal authority for the administration of local law, at least until it has first exhausted its own resources.

The President has been absolutely right in his attitude toward Nevada in the matter of the Goldfield disturbances. When the governor called upon him for assistance, in the manner provided by law, he sent a sufficient military force to suppress any dangerous disorder. At the same time he insisted that the governor should follow the course contemplated by the Constitution and convene the Legislature to consider the situation. This has been done. The Legislature is to meet today, and if it is duly ascertained that there is no existing insurrection to justify the presence of United States forces the President has rightly ordered their withdrawal. Nevada is left to provide for its own proper government.

While it is impossible to feel much confidence in Nevada's ability to do this, there is no possible pretext for any outside interference. We can not assume the unfitness of the population to exercise the rights and duties of American citizens, and the only possible course is to throw the responsibility upon them and allow them to work out their own salvation as a self-reliant Commonwealth. The paternal [illegible] which the country at large has to [illegible] in this experience is to exercise caution [illegible] in the declaration of new states.

IS ADMIRAL BROWNSON A TRAITOR?

From the Baltimore Sun.

The President's denunciation of Admiral Brownson in the letter to the Secretary of the Navy, which was made public from the White House Sunday, would be startling if Mr Roosevelt had not familiarized us with such outbursts. The severe and extreme language employed against an officer who, according to the President's own testimony, has rendered "fine service in the past," could only be justified by the commission of some flagrant offense. To refer to an officer of the highest rank in the navy who has had a long and honorable record of "fine service" as "childish," as governed by "personal pique," "wounded vanity," or "factional feeling" and as a climax, to charge such an officer with disloyalty to the interests of the navy and to the country is an indictment of too grave a character to be lightly made by any one, least of all by the Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy whose words are supposed to be authoritative and official. To say that a man is "disloyal" to his country is in effect to denounce him as a traitor, treason by an army or navy officer is a high crime and misdemeanor. The only fact that the President cites by way of justifying his language and charges against Admiral Brownson is that the latter resigned from the place of chief of the Bureau of Navigation "because he did not agree with President and department regarding an order issued before he came into the bureau by the Secretary of the Navy as to the control of the hospital ships."

The impression is growing day by day that in order to obtain promotion in the army and recognition in the navy a practical knowledge of the arts of the courtier is more serviceable than a record of fine service, however distinguished. What was Admiral Brownson's offense? He was on the retired list of the navy. Having devoted all the years of his manhood to the service and having served well, he was entitled to retire from active work. But before retiring he had been assigned as chief of the Bureau of Navigation, and was kept there, it is understood, at the President's special request. The President issued an order which in the judgment of Admiral Brownson was prejudicial to the service. He could not refuse to obey the order, but he could respectfully protest against it and call the attention of the President to the danger which it involved to the service. Finding himself absolutely out of accord with the President on an important question of policy, there was every reason why he should not remain at the head of the Bureau of Navigation. Under the circumstances it would have been unseemly and improper for him to have remained. In resigning he surrendered easy work and a large pay. To intimate that such a resignation savors in any way of disloyalty to his country or of treason is a preposterous abuse of language and a distortion of facts. It was rather the act of a man who was willing to surrender his own personal advantage and a large income and incur the displeasure of the President for what he esteemed the good of the service. It will be so considered by the country, the act of an unselfish and loyal official who prefers what he believes to be the good of the service to his own ease and prosperity.

The mere mention of the recent attacks upon the efficiency of the navy in connection with Admiral Brownson was an act of gross injustice for Admiral Brownson has been one of the stoutest defenders of the navy from those attacks.

It will appear to many that his estimate of his own infallible judgment and omniscience is such that the President is convinced that all those who disagree with him are and of necessity must be traitors. The fact that Mr Roosevelt has at last made public Admiral Brownson's letter of resignation will not alter the impression that he has not been accorded a square deal. It looks as if he had been forced by public opinion to do what was demanded and what he knew Congress would do for him. His conduct in this case, as in others, has not been generous or chivalrous or such as befits a knight who carries a banner with the lofty device—"A Square Deal."

The Spaniard who, it is alleged, he shot in the back at San Juan Hill was an avowed enemy of this country and had no right to complain, no matter what part his assassin was selected for Mr Roosevelt's [illegible]. But for a naval officer of the United States who is practically defenseless, to be made the target for Presidential broadsides does not appeal to the American sense of fair play.

The country will conclude that the President has acted in this matter more of hysterical impulse than with calm coolness, justice and judgment. It will now be appropriate for Congress to intervene and settle the matter.

CLIMBING THE ALPS

Two Men Dangle on Rope Six Thousand Feet Above the Jagged Rocks, Where Death Invites Them—Narrow Escape of Two Men Who Ascended Matterhorn Guideless—Result of Failure of Tourist's Nerve.

From the Philadelphia North American.

IT was a bright August day and fine weather for mountaineering in the Alps when two or three men who happened to be looking up at one of the most precipitous rock faces of the Matterhorn saw a thrilling event that few could witness with unflinching eyes. One of them, a professional guide, instantly turned his eyes from that scene and looked down at the snow 6,000 feet below, so that he might fix in mind the spot where he expected every instant to see the bodies of two men drop.

Far up toward the top of the famous mountain two men were dangling on a rope, swinging to and fro over an abyss whose bottom lay more than a mile below them.

Both men are alive today, and each of them has told the story of that terrible hour in the latest number of La Montagne, the periodical of the French Alpine club. It has its interest and its value as a lesson to mountaineers.

A Passion for Mountaineering

Edouard Monod-Herzen, a young Frenchman, has a passion for mountaineering and is among the best of French alpinists. Early in the season last year he made three ascents of the Matterhorn and returned to Zermatt in August to climb the mountain again with a young Russian, Sergius Siroff, whose brother Charles, a fine mountaineer, had been the Frenchman's comrade in a good deal of climbing.

All that Monod-Herzen knew of the qualifications of Sergius was that Charles had assured him that the young man had acquitted himself creditably in the ascent of the Weisshorn and several other hard climbs. The Frenchman found to his cost that he was very rash in inviting a man of whose ability he had no proofs and knowledge to share with him the hardest bit of climbing in Europe.

Starting from Zermatt at 2 a.m. the young men made a successful ascent on the Swiss side of the mountain. They reached the summit at 11 and spent an hour enjoying the magnificent panorama which every step revealed.

They found two other parties on the summit, both in charge of guides, one of whom was the famous Burgener, who had taught Monod-Herzen nearly all he knew of mountaineering. The two parties started to descend the Italian side of the mountain, and the young men leisurely followed them.

An Almost Perpendicular Rock

Not far below the summit the southern side of the Matterhorn rock face that slants fairly perpendicular. It can be circumvented only by a tedious detour which requires so much time that four rope ladders are fastened below the other. These ladders, this vertical wall, are the number of ascent and descent.

With the aid of these stout ladders there is no great danger for an experienced man if he has great strength of arms and a good head. As an additional safeguard a long hempen rope is fastened to the wall at the top of the highest ladder and hangs down beside them to the bottom of the lowest ladder. It may be called the emergency line. It saved the lives of these two young men.

As soon as they had reached the topmost ladder they proceeded to adjust the rope that tied them to each other. Then Monod-Herzen sent Siroff down ahead and paid out the rope until most of the slack was taken up.

He then turned over on his face and began the descent, calling now and then to his comrade, who each time cheerily responded that all was well. They had thus descended about sixty feet, half the height of the precipitous wall, to whose face they were clinging when, without the slightest warning, that trouble was brewing, and just as the Frenchman was taking a step down he heard the words in a tone more like a deep sigh than a cry of terror:

A Terrible Position

Oh, I am falling.

Instantly Monod-Herzen braced himself against the pull on the rope. It occurred to him quick as a flash that he could not get his fingers clear around the rung of the ladder because it lay too close against the wall. He instantly removed his hands and grasped the loose line just as the shock came.

It pulled him off the ladder and he was swinging in midair. The rope that joined the men was tied around their waists. The weight of both men was supported by the Frenchman's grip upon that rope. If his wrists gave out or his fingers could not maintain their grip they would both fall over a mile upon the ice and snow below.

The shock that jerked Monod-Herzen off the ladder swung him out into the air and he came back like a pendulum against the rock wall, adding severe bruises to his injuries and nearly loosening his hold on the rope. Grip as hard as he might, he could not keep the rope from slipping a little through his fingers.

All the skin was rubbed off the palms of his hands. Blood covered the cord and bits of flesh clung to it and it seemed to him as though the rope around his body was cutting him in two, so heavy was the Russian at the other end.

A Cry for Help.

He cried with all his might for Burgener, who could just be seen far below. Burgener heard the appeal from above:

"What's the matter?" he shouted.

"My friend has fallen. Come."

"Where?"

"Here, he is hanging on my rope. Come!"

Great as the crisis was, Burgener did not violate the unwritten law of his profession. He disappeared around the rock to obtain permission from the man he was serving to go to the rescue.

He was told to go, and up the rocks he sprang like a goat. About fifteen minutes elapsed before he reached the ladders, and all that time the lives of the two men depended upon the grip of the bleeding fingers.

Clutching the ladder, Burgener grasped the swinging rope as it came near, drew it to the wall and carefully helped the young Russian back to the ladder and fastened him there. Then he clambered above and helped Monod-Herzen to the ladder.

Back to the Russian he went again and placed his hands and feet in every rung of the ladders they crossed, a platform only which they rested for a while, and then slowly worked down to the Tourist, who the Burgener had left. The vertical drop of the wall was now above them.

Neither on that day nor later was Monod-Herzen able to learn from his companion exactly what happened. Siroff could say only that he felt his hands opening and he had no power to close them again upon the rungs of the ladder. He seemed almost half dead as he was lowered below.

His First Duty

Burgener then said that his first duty was to the man whose safety was his special charge. He would do this, however, he would take his tourist one stage further on the descent and then return to help them to the same point. Below that place he could not be with them for he must deliver his man at Breuil before dark.

The faithful guide fulfilled his promise, but Monod-Herzen was almost in despair when he and his friend were left alone. Burgener could not possibly return to them with a rescue party before the next forenoon, and meanwhile they would certainly freeze to death if they spent the night on the mountain.

But they did not. Most of the descent had been taken by Burgener had helped them past the most formidable difficulties. After a hour's rest the young Siroff found in himself enough of his strength and physical strength, and they slowly worked down together, reaching Breuil at 11 p.m.

Siroff, the friend who had saved his life, said that while he was swinging in the air he had tried to shake off his companion, but the grip held and Siroff's hands would not open. He could speak no words but could only think. Monod-Herzen, he said, would rather sacrifice his life than lose his grip, and that such an act was entirely contrary to his good.

WASTE IN LUMBERING SOUTHERN APPALACHIAN FORESTS

The forests of the southern Appalachian mountains have been cut so sagely for the valuable hardwoods they contain that very little virgin timber is left and about 85 per cent of the area is second growth.

The drain on these forests by many industries is immense. The lumbermen are going over the land for the third time. First they took only the pine oak and poplar saw timber. Next they took the oaks that were suited for barrel staves. Now they are after what ever merchantable timber is left, such as birch, chestnut and oak.

Moreover, these trees have been and still are being wastefully. Nearly three-quarters of the timber cut for ties is wasted. Double or even treble the number of ties that might be cut could be secured from the same area without injury to the forest. By simply taking all the standing trees 12 inches could be cut from an acre which now yields only 60, and if all of the wood in the trees were fully utilized 100 additional ties per acre could be secured.

With mine ties the story is the same. Fully 40 per cent of the timber handled in producing them is entirely waste!

This waste is injuring the productiveness of the Appalachian forests by running over the ground and killing young growth.

Circular 135, just published by the forest service, discusses the question of managing to better advantage the second growth forests of the Appalachian region. This publication can be obtained of the forester at Washington.

A NOWHERE LAND ZOO

Skipper of the Planet—Venus Tells of Great Pacific Menagerie.

From the New York Evening Sun.

Lobos de Tierra is an island in the Pacific about 12 miles off the coast of Peru and about 400 miles north of Callao. Swarms of birds soar continually above the island during the daylight hours and the playful dolphin may be seen at almost any old time. Birds and sea lions also disport themselves in profusion on the beach and off-shore rocks. The island is mostly sand and rocks. It is narrow but rises inland to a height of about 700 feet. There is no vegetation and the beaches glisten all day in the vibrant tropic sun. On the main and the island rise in majestic perspective snow capped, lofty summits.

The British steamship Planet Venus which docked today at Staten Island, Jan. 21 Lobos de Tierra 21 days, 6 September leaving guano. After that she touched at Cabo Tulipano and other west coast ports taking aboard additional cargo, consisting mostly of nitrate ore. The crew of the Planet Venus did not work very hard on the island. They tended the winches and the natives, mostly "red Indians," did the rest. The steamship lay off-shore and the cargo was brought alongside in lighters. There are about 200 natives at the island according to Captain Murray's estimate, and a few Spaniards. The natives employ themselves generally at fishing. Besides dolphin, bonito, albacore and other deep sea fish abound. They are dried in the sun and once in a while a steamboat comes off from the mainland and takes away a shipment.

As the island is in a sweltering latitude, the natives are not forced to wear heavy clothing. Conventional laws are not applied literally at Lobos de Tierra and there is a wild atmosphere about the place that impressed the officers of the Planet Venus. The cloud of birds circling about the island was remarkable. It was an unusual cloud of birds, Captain Murray said. It is it contained probably a dozen different species. Pelicans, gulls, sea hawks, and sometimes a great vulture or two strayed over from the mainland. The birds made a great hubbub and sometimes covered the beach in chattering squawking multitudes. Sometimes the racket of the birds was added to by the barking of sea lions.

Under the conditions the officers of the Planet Venus had plentiful opportunities for studying life at Lobos de Tierra—wolf of the land—called so because it is long and gray and rakish-looking. It was reported by one of the officers that the sea lions at the island are wonderfully intelligent and have been trained in some cases with remarkable results. For instance, the officer said, when the beach at Lobos de Tierra is so crowded with birds as to interfere with the movement of the native boats the sea lions are of great assistance. At those times the smart lions swim through the surf with a line and haul the boats through the great flocks of birds.

The sea lions at Lobos de Tierra do not lack for recreation, it appears. At one place a steep incline of smooth rock descends into the sea. This incline is perhaps 300 feet long and, according to report, is used as a shoot-the-chutes by the playful lions. Scores of them were seen at different times, according to the officers, sliding down the convenient declivity into the sea.

"They seem to enjoy the pastime very much," said the spokesman of the party, looking across the Hudson with a far away expression of eye. The officer said grimly that such was the case.

GOLD CHEERS STARVING MEN

A. A. Allen and A. G. Lait of This City Strike it Rich in Utah

Staking their last dollar on a prospect in a quartz reef miles from civilization in the Bad Lands of Utah at the base of the Wahsatch range, and living for days on the scrapings of a flour barrel and wild berries, pluck did the rest. Hunches in the hills A. A. Allen of 1115 East Platte street, and A. G. Lait of 434 East Boulder street, Colorado Springs, becoming discouraged struck camp one morning three weeks ago and after packing their effects on burros made a last desperate attempt to wrest fortune from the hills. With hammers they pulverized a specimen from the ledge and washed it in a gold pans. After the dirt had been removed the bottom of the pan sparkled with nuggets of glistening gold. The value of this first panning was more than $[illegible].

RAISE TREES IN COLORADO

Dr. Creighton Shows That Task Is Not Difficult—Dean Sturgis Speaks on Forestry School

At the annual meeting of the Colorado State Forestry association held in Denver Dr. B. B. Creighton of Manitou was one of the principal speakers and made the statement that [illegible] have as many acres of forest as are desired. He said [illegible] found by long experiment that black locust, white elm, green ash, crust and red cedar trees can be grown wherever there is an annual rainfall of 12 to 15 inches and as there is scarcely an area in this state with less rainfall it is clear that forests can be raised in any part of the state.

Dr. W. C. Sturgis dean of the Colorado College School of Forestry spoke of the work accomplished by that institution which was founded in response to popular demand for the preservation of forests now existing in the country and for the production of new forests. The course at the school is a three years one while that at Yale which covers the same ground requires only two years to complete.

The most important addresses of the afternoon were those of Mrs. Henry F. Hicks on What Women Are Doing in Forestry, Dr. William C. Sturgis on The Colorado School of Forestry at Colorado College and Jacob Fillius on What the Denver City Park Board is Doing With Trees.

E. O. Van Diest of this city was elected to the board of directors of the association.

CHARGE BISHOP WITH PERJURY

Witness in Spear-Parker Case Involved in Difficulties on Account of Testimony

Not only has the confession made by Omar Kaessner that it was he who shot the Spear cow last July helped to clear L. A. Parker to whom the offense was charged but it has involved Clare or Bishop the chief witness for Spear brothers in serious difficulties. He will have to answer to the charge of perjury.

Bishop was arrested by Constable W. I. Larrabee and in Justice Rubey's court yesterday was released under $800 bond to appear tomorrow morning to answer to the charge of perjury. Bishop was the principal witness in the original suit and in his testimony declared that he had seen Parker in the act of shooting the cow. Now that young Kaessner has made a confession Bishop's testimony appears in a damaging light. The matter is being investigated by the district attorney's office.

Although no action was taken yesterday attorneys for Parker will move for a new trial in the county court. They have until next Tuesday to file this motion.

Poultry Association Elects Officers and Makes Plans for Next Annual Show

Officers of the Pikes Peak Poultry association were elected at a [illegible] meeting held last night in the city hall. A. A. Hilton was elected president, the other officers being as follows: L. L. Ibbs, first vice president; Fred Imbler, second vice president; George W. Neltz, secretary-treasurer; Dr. J. H. Brunner, J. M. Johnson, H. H. Chase, J. W. Gilles and L. S. Harner, directors.

The next annual show is to be held during the Christmas week in December according to decisions made at the last night when preliminary plans for the annual event were made. Secretary Neltz was instructed to write Miss Gardner of Auburn, N. Y., one of the leading experts in poultry for the United States, during the country to secure her services as judge for the show. Mr. Gardner with his wife will be in Colorado Springs during that time on their way to California.

Already plans are on foot to make the 1908 show the greatest in the history of the association. A special effort will be made to induce exhibitors from out of the state to send in entries, and to this end it is probable that a number of cash prizes will be offered. The full report of the last show held a month ago in the DeGraff building was read showing that it was a big success in every way.

WILL HONOR BOBBIE BURNS

Caledonian Society to Hold Banquet at Antlers in Memory of Scottish Poet

Native sons of Scotland will commemorate the anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns the immortal Scottish bard at the eleventh Burns banquet to be given by the Caledonian society of Colorado Springs at the Antlers hotel Wednesday evening January 29. A song festival will be a feature of the celebration.

The democratic spirit of Burns' poems appeal strongly to Americans and the reason is clear when the following incident is recalled. On the occasion of a convivial assembly at Dumfries during the American revolutionary war among the toasts was proposed "Success to His Majesty's Arms." Before the toast was honored Burns jumped to his feet and exclaimed "May the success of our arms be in proportion to the justice of our cause."

The principal officers of the Caledonian society of Colorado Springs are William Strachan, chief; Alexander Gregg, treasurer and Kenneth McKenzie, secretary.

WOMEN WIELD THE RAZOR

Female Barbers Who Earn Living at Shaving in Manhattan.

From the New York Globe.

Women shoe horses, drive mail wagons, direct gangs of engineers in construction work, work claims in the mining country and do other hard and hazardous work—but how would you like to be a woman barber? At least six women in New York wield the soap and brush and the razor as a regular profession every day in Manhattan. In Brooklyn half a dozen others make a living in the same way. The women learn the "trade" in the regular barber and hairdressing schools, where the pupils practice on "free" customers, or else they are taught by a barber who takes them into his shop as an apprentice and then as an assistant.

The woman barber charges the same prices as men barbers do for a shave and a haircut, and she will give the beauty-seeker customers all kinds of fancy vibrassages and hot towels, cold cream, aromatic vinegar massage treatment if his head is getting bald or his complexion does not please his best girl.

"Shaving is very suitable work for women," said one fair wielder of the razor as she folded a monogramed towel and put a cutglass bay rum flask back in place. "Women don't drink—working women don't, anyway—as a rule, and a man needn't be afraid that her hand will tremble and cut his throat because she has been out all night with the boys. Women barbers are usually specimens of good health, with strong nerves.

"The standing is wearisome and the customers are often trying. It may be the fault of the beard, the razor or the barber. Anyway, if a barber scratches a man he don't say much, but heaven help the woman who scratches him. He is up in the air in one minute." He was a fool to let her try to shave him. He will have her license revoked. And on he raves, and then goes out without giving the coat boy a tip—another thing that he wouldn't do in a man's barber shop. But we very seldom scratch or cut anyone, and we have regular customers who wouldn't go to anyone else."

The woman barber makes money. She doesn't get as many tips as the manicure girl does, but her expenses are comparatively light—rent being the only heavy one—and if she is quick and skillful she can shave six customers in an hour, and she can make from $8 to $10 a day if her shop is in a busy location.

In Barclay street there is a barber shop conducted by women, and in Broad street is another. Each shop has three chairs, which are almost constantly filled.

A funny thing about the "lady barber" is that she seldom talks when she is at work!

We are told that it takes nine tailors to make a man. But in many cases the bill [illegible]

WILL REPEAT MINSTREL SHOW

Elks Will Present Popular Program in the Opera House for Cause of Charity.

The Elks club is planning to repeat the minstrel show which the club gave last December, this time for the benefit of charity. It has not been decided definitely to what charity the money will be given, but it will doubtless go to some worthy cause in the city. The show will be given in the Opera House one evening during the first week in February, according to present plans. In addition to the best parts of the show as given last month with such success, several new songs and novelties will be added. A rehearsal of the entire company will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30, and all members are requested to report at that time. The minstrel committee is composed of S. N. Nye, business manager, W. J. Fink and D. E. Rawley, music; Lou Fink, director; H. P. Barber and Robert Ellis. The general committee is as follows: R. W. Chisholm, chairman; D. N. Heizer, G. M. Taylor, Dr. D. I. Christopher and J. E. Lundstrom.

KAPPA SIGS WILL COME WEST

Popular College Fraternity Will Hold Annual Meet in Denver Next July.

Between 300 and 400 members of the Kappa Sigma fraternity will visit Colorado Springs at the time of the annual convention of that society which is to be held in Denver, July 2, 3 and 4. They will be the guests of the Colorado College chapter, which is co-operating with those in Denver university and the Colorado School of Mines in planning for the annual conclave.

Kappa Sigma has one of the largest chapter rolls of any undergraduate college fraternity in the United States, and is represented in many of the large universities and prominent colleges in this country and Canada. This will be the first time that its members have come to the Rocky Mountain region for their annual conclave.

Colorado Springs will also entertain at the same time some 50 or more members of the Attorneys General association of the United States, which is an organization of the legal heads of the various state departments. Attorney General Dickson, secretary of the association, is now making arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates at their Denver convention and will probably include a trip to the Pikes Peak region in the program.

HOUSE-CLEANING BY ELECTRICITY

The Electric House-Cleaner Has a Double Fan, a Revolving Brush and Receptables for Dust and Dirt.

Electricity has banished the twice-a-year house-cleaning time and all the haunting terrors which the name implies. The home of today is kept permanently clean with the electric renovator and consequently there is no spring or fall house-cleaning work to be done.

Electricity has added much to the comforts of the home, from ringing the door bell to sifting the ashes; from lighting the rooms to cooking the food, and now it has condescended to take on the additional responsibility of cleaning the home.

Primarily the electric house-cleaner consists of a small movable device equipped with a double fan, a revolving brush and proper receptacles for dust and dirt. The fan and the brush are driven by a powerful, though small, general electric motor. The brush loosens every particle of dust in the floor covering and the dirt is drawn into the dust receptacle by a strong volume of air. Sweeping the floors in this way leaves no clouds of settling dust to settle later on the furniture and fixtures. The machine will pick up matches and pieces of paper or pins as it moves across the floor. Carpets and rugs can be cleaned in a tenth of the time it takes to sweep them by hand. The furniture and curtains can be thoroughly cleaned without removing them from their original positions. Hotels, churches and theaters having large carpeted interiors also find the electric cleaner most valuable on account of the speed with which large carpets and extensive furniture can be cleaned.

The electrical connections are made at the lamp socket and the machine is pushed across the floor like an ordinary carpet sweeper. For cleaning under radiators, furniture or in corners a hose attachment is used which will reach the most inaccessible places.

The device is equipped with several important attachments. One to clean floor coverings, cushions, mattresses, lounges, etc., another for cleaning crevices, corners, and all difficult places from floor to ceiling. Still another is used to clean walls, pictures, curtains, mouldings, shelves, cornices, ornaments or fixtures, etc. No skill is required to operate the machine; there is no deafening noise and the work can be done in a few minutes at a trifling cost.

Not only does the electrical housecleaner sweep the house thoroughly but it sterilizes and renovates as well. There is an attachment for driving a blast of air through pillows, mattresses, and cushions and still another to sterilize for the destruction of disease germs.

When a room needs cleaning all that is necessary is to bring up the electric cleaner and attach the flexible cord to the lamp socket. The motor is started and the cleaner pushed back and forth across the floor until the carpet is clean. Then with the hose connections the furniture, curtains and other fixtures are all cleaned. When the work is done the motor is stopped and the machine taken to the next room. There is no disagreeable dusting to be done.

The good wife will welcome the electric house-cleaner because it will lessen her labors and the man of the house—well, he will thank his lucky stars for the timely invention, live several years longer and the outlook for his future will be considerably better because of it.

"Mamma, he's a question that has always puzzled me," said 5-year-old Marjorie, perplexedly. "How is it that when I am dressed I wear all my clothes, but when you dress a chicken it has nothing on at all?"

Woman finds wouldn't do a thing to men in bream-of-promise suits.

A woman's curiosity is exceeded only by that of a man who says he hasn't any.

are among the contributors to the February number of The American Magazine. To find five big features in any one number of any magazine is unusual. Below they are mentioned.

F. P. Dunne gives "Mr. Dooley" on "Hard Times," (the mention of a "Dooley" article is enough). Ray Stannard Baker writes of the Negro in the North. Upton Sinclair continues his attack on the extravagances, dissipation and immorality of "The Social Set." Lincoln Steffens tells the story of Rudolph Spreckels, the great fighting business man, who is striving for clean politics and clean business in San Francisco. Miss Tarbell shows the present day marketing methods and business strategy of the Standard Oil.

And of course, there are stories, lots of them. Stories well worth any one's time to read.

The American Magazine is still selling for 10 Cents it is on the news stands today.

A Mother Testifies

This is to certify that my daughter was down for almost six years with a cold. The doctors finally pronounced it consumption. We had given up hope for her recovery. I was given a sample bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. I gave it all to her in about three weeks. It stopped the cough, and gave her rest. I sent next day and bought a good bottle and began giving it. In three month's time she was well. There can not be too much said in favor of Foley's Honey and Tar. It saved my child's life. Mrs. George Barton, Fountain Grove, Mo.

SWITCH ENGINE BUMPED CAR

Paderewski Was Being Shaved by Awkward Valet and Came Near Having Jugular Severed

Ignace Paderewski the famous pianist who will appear in this city at the Opera House on February [illegible] had a very narrow escape from being [illegible] cut while being shaved in his private car in Cincinnati which he was booked to give a concert the evening last week. Paderewski is a great favorite in Denver and the advance sale of seats was very heavy.

It happened that Paderewski is unfortunate in the choice of his valets. [illegible] connections and arrived in this city quite late in the afternoon. He immediately made preparations for his concert which require considerable time. He discovered that he had shaved too late to get into a dress suit. As he is extremely fastidious about his personal appearance he refused to play the concert unless he could be shaved.

IGNACE PADEREWSKI
The Famous Polish Pianist Who Will Appear at Opera House Wednesday, February

Paderewski has never learned the art of shaving and hence the management was in a predicament. None of the personal servants was willing to try to shave a man so nervous as Paderewski. It was getting dangerously near the concert hour when the valet consented to try his hand at the work. The task was almost completed and only the right ear remained to be shaved when a swift engine pinged into his throat and caused the valet to make a slight cut in Paderewski's neck. The wound itself was not particularly serious but it had a disastrous effect on the great pianist's nerves. He was so wrought up that it was with great difficulty he rendered the evening's program.

In the thousands of miles Paderewski has traveled in America never had an incident until just before he left this country a year ago when by a narrow shave he was [illegible] being smashed to pieces in New York state. It was a full year before he recovered from the nervous shock he received at that time and accordingly it does not take very much now when traveling to get his nerves on the jump.

Paderewski will play in this city under the auspices of Charles B. Hall in the first of the series of fine musical attractions secured for this city by Mr. Hall. His appearance in this city will be the only one outside of Denver and judging from the advance sale of seats a capacity audience will greet him on the evening of February 5.

What the Press Agents Say

ATTRACTION AT THE OPERA HOUSE TODAY

The Lieutenant of the Law, a play by Arthur [illegible], presented at the Opera House this evening by the well known actor, Mr. Theodore Lorch, supported by a strong company. With the popular prices they give performances well worth the money. The Lieutenant and the cowboy will be repeated again tomorrow. They will give a burlesque matinee in the afternoon at 2:30 and again in the evening. The matinee prices will be 10 cents and 20 cents. Reserved seats can be secured for the evening performances.

"THE NEW BLACK CROOK"

At the Opera House next Friday evening Messrs. Miller and Platn will present a new version of The Black Crook, one of the greatest successes ever known to America.

In producing this notable spectacle the management, while they have to some extent followed tradition, have not hesitated to introduce much that is modern, but not so much that The Black Crook will lose its identity. The version of the play for it is unlike the new style of extravaganza and can fairly claim to the title "play," inasmuch as it possesses a definite plot, is an entirely new and [illegible] It is divided into three acts and 15 scenes and the story of Hertzog [illegible] Rudolph and Amina, the youthful hero and heroine, and the wicked [illegible] Wolfenstein is carried out to its logical conclusion. While the children of a ballet have been banned in the present production there will be no lack of femininity as a staff of fifty comely girls is employed.

THE MAN ON THE BOX

Max Figman has established himself the foremost comedian on the American stage by his admirable interpretation of Harold MacGrath's hero in "The Man on the Box," which will be seen at the Opera House soon. From the Atlantic to the Pacific coast and from Canada to Mexico nothing but praises have been spoken of Mr. Figman's art, the excellence of his company and the perfection of his scenic production. To achieve success in a character of which all readers have formed preconceived ideals is no mean task, and denotes one of the best actors of the modern stage, and his performance of "The Man on the Box" dispels all question and places him in the front rank of American comedy stars. Mr. Figman is under the management of Mr. John Cort, who also directs the tours of Madame Calve, Sarah Truax, "The Alaskan" and Maude Fealy, in addition looking after some seventy odd theatres in [illegible]

AMATEUR NIGHT AT THE EMPIRE

Tonight is amateur night at The Empire and those who have attended in the past know what that means. This feature of the program since inaugurated by Manager Ellis has taken the amusement world by storm and is becoming more popular every week. For tonight Manager Ellis offers an unusual assortment of local talent, among which will appear the inimitable Joe [illegible] in a monologue study that is sure to make all lovers of the magic lantern look like amateurs. The regular bill will be put on as usual, [illegible] except matinees, good this week. The Morton Jewell troupe of jugglers are making the hit of the week by their clever work. Gilligan and Pearson are good entertainers and sing a song of some merit, being far above the average. Professor Louis, ventriloquist, is the best ventriloquist ever seen on this or any other stage. His act is highly pleasing. A new illustrated song and motion pictures are on the program as usual.

MISSION STUDY AT COLLEGE

Students Much Interested in Foreign Field and Volunteer Movement Proves Popular

Since the organization of the student volunteer movement over 2,000 volunteers have sailed for the foreign field under the various mission boards. Already seven volunteers from Colorado College are doing service in foreign lands. The volunteer band at Colorado College was organized in 1895 by Horace Tracy Pitkin, who suffered martyrdom in the Boxer uprising in China and at the present time there are 11 volunteers in the college, six young men and five young women who are preparing themselves for missionary work. They will be very glad to co-operate with any of the young people's societies in the city, with a view of stimulating deeper interest in the missionary cause. Any societies desiring representatives from the volunteer band at the college to assist in their meetings should communicate with E. W. Norris, Hagerman hall, as he is in charge of this part of the work.

The missionary committee of the College Y. M. C. A. is doing things this year. Already over $200 has been secured in subscriptions towards foreign missions and the work throughout the college is being unified with a view of developing interest so that within the next two years Colorado College can have her own missionary representative on the foreign field.

Plans have been perfected for an extensive campaign in the interest of mission study. Few people realize the true status of affairs in foreign lands and find their [illegible] mission work from very meager information, which is sometimes unreliable and untrue. During the past term 22 students were enrolled in classes studying the books, "Uplift of China," by Arthur Smith, and "Effective Workers in Needy Fields," which takes up the lives of Livingstone, Mackay, Isabella Thoburn, Hamlin and Neel. [illegible] It is planned to [illegible] Monday, and see every member of the College Y. M. C. A. personally, including this most important work. Already a number of young men have indicated their willingness to take up this work. The classes will be under competent leaders and will meet once every week.

F. D. Riggs is chairman of the missionary committee. Other [illegible] on the committee are J. C. Crane, W. M. Slane, E. Fuller, H. O. [illegible], F. J. Hill. Others who will [illegible] the canvass are [illegible], E. E. Ewing, George Gibbs, [illegible], A. E. Hay[illegible].

ELECTRICITY IN THE COTTON INDUSTRY

Transmission of High Tension Electricity and Its Relation to the Cotton Industry.

The development of thousands of electrical horsepower from rivers and large streams and the perfection of high tension transmission lines has done more for the textile industry than anything else in its history since the invention of the cotton gin. In the beginning it was the practice to locate the textile mills upon the banks of streams where water power was available. Few, indeed, were the large water falls which could be used for such purposes, and at the same time have the mill within the reach of a railroad or waterway so necessary in shipping the finished product. But since the development of high tension transmission all this has changed. Now the power can be developed wherever found and the electric current transmitted hundreds of miles over light copper wires suspended from steel towers to the mills located at good shipping points.

In 1884, the cotton mills of Columbia, S. C., first began the use of electricity. Today a total of over 1,000,000 horsepower is used in cotton mills in the South. This is more than a third of the total horsepower required. Nearly 400 textile mills in the United States have been equipped with electricity, using nearly 6,000 motors and generating machines and utilizing over 200,000 electrical horsepower.

A few years ago, the north thought it a good joke that the south should attempt to become the textile center of the world. But now the south is laughing last, and as usual [illegible]

[illegible] largest cotton mills of the south are located in South Carolina, and it is in this state where the greatest development in water power is taking place. Both the Yadkin and the Catawba rivers are being harnessed. While the Southern Power company has reached its fullest development, as planned, on the Catawba, it will be able to turn 11,000,000 spindles at a cost of $6,111,111 if the mill owners, or half the cost of the present steam power. This electrical project is numbered with the largest in the world, being second only to Niagara. The company has now under way plants which will generate a total of 331,111 horsepower.

Another large South Carolina development is that of the Whitney company on the Yadkin, 25 miles southeast of Salisbury. This company was organized and work started in 1904. The canal from the great dam to the power house is four and one [illegible] feet wide at the top, [illegible] feet bottom and [illegible] water [illegible] Catawba [illegible] which will give the Whitney company 90,000 additional horsepower.

In the Appalachian section of the south it is estimated that over 2,000,000 horsepower from water rights is now being spent in developing water power in that section.

The effect of the introduction of electric power in the southern cotton mills has been to greatly increase the number of mills as well as the number of spindles. The capital now invested in cotton mills in the south is estimated at $250,000,000, an increase since 1880 of $229,000,000, or 1,000 per cent. In the past five years the total spindlage of the United States was increased from 22,239,633 to 25,924,274 or by about 3,684,641. Nearly 80 per cent of this increase was in the southern states.

TEREDO NAVALIS

The vicissitudes of a submarine cable are many. It may be torn by an anchor, crushed by a rock or seriously damaged by a coral reef such as abound in the tropics. Some of the growths often found on a cable tend gradually to decay the iron sheathing wires. Then a cable is sometimes severed by a seaquake. It may be fatally attacked by the snout of a sawfish or by the spike of a swordfish. But perhaps the little animal that makes itself most objectionable from the cable engineer's standpoint is the insignificant looking teredo navalis. This little beast is intensely greedy where gutta percha is concerned, working its way there between the iron wires and between the serving yarns. The silica in the outer cable compound tends to defeat the teredo's efforts at making a meal off the core, and this [illegible] further effected by [illegible] being [illegible] velvet in a thin taping of brass. Where the bottom is known to be badly infested [illegible] the deep the water is [illegible] composed of lead [illegible] attractive for [illegible] a tempting [illegible] suited for its [illegible] so actively [illegible]

TAKE ATLANTA CLAIM

TREVARROW BROTHERS SECURE GOOD PROPERTY.

Claim Is Located in Fashionable Neighborhood.—Prospects Are Good.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Jan. 23.—A lease has just been granted by the officers of the Gilpin and Cripple Creek Gold Mining company on the Atlanta claim, to Trevarrow Brothers for a period of two years, and it is understood that the owners are [illegible] The Atlanta claim is located in a most fashionable neighborhood, being surrounded by the Findley, Half City, Placer, Vindicator and other large and heavy producers of the ore.

Ed Trevarrow, superintendent of the Vindicator, has a fine knowledge of formation and conditions existing in this section of the camp, and it is believed that they have knowledge of ore or are reasonably certain to find it with but little dead work.

Considerable work in the way of sinking and running laterals has been done on this property in the past, but for the past several years no work of any moment has been in progress. With such a network of veins and ore bodies as are to be found in this vicinity, it will be surprising if Trevarrow Brothers fail to find good ore. It is said that quite recently there have been a number of applicants for the lease of the Atlanta, but it is probable that the lease was given to Mr. Trevarrow on account of his well-known mining ability and knowledge. Mr. Trevarrow ranks among the very highest in the camp among mining men, and he has made an enviable record since taking charge of the Vindicator.

AIR CONNECTIONS COMPLETED

Crosscut Driven From Forest Queen to Pride of Cripple Creek.—Good Ore in Sight.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Jan. 23.—D. D. Fogleman, superintendent of the Forest Queen property, under lease to Roach & Company of Chicago, has just completed a piece of contract work, which consisted in driving a crosscut from the Forest Queen property on the 600-foot level to connect with the Pride of Cripple Creek mine, which lies immediately to the west and north of the Forest Queen. This crosscut was made for air connections.

There has been a vast amount of work done in the Pride of Cripple Creek and one or more veins have been encountered, but to date very little ore has been extracted. In the Forest Queen there are several large and profitable ore bodies, and the lease is shipping from three to five cars of ore a week, and the values range from $30 to $60 in gold to the ton. The greater portion of the ore, which is being mined and shipped from the Forest Queen, is coming from the 500-foot level, where a large ore body has been uncovered and followed for a long distance.

REGULAR WEEKLY SHIPMENTS

Ore Sent Out From W. P. H. Claim Will Run $30 to Ton.—Shoot Is About Four Feet in Width.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Jan. 23.—I. A. Hayden, who has a lease on the W. P. H. claim of the Unified Gold Mines company on Ironclad hill, which was made famous by Harrison and Seaver, who took out in one year $1,000,000 gross, is making regularly weekly shipments of ore, which give returns around $30 in gold to the ton.

Lessee Hayden made a fortune in the Gregory claim of the Elkton company two or three years ago and it is reported that he is making a nice income every month from his present operations. Most of the work being done on the W. P. H. is below the level where Harrison and Seaver secured such richness. The shoot is from three to four feet wide, but pinches down and will suddenly widen out. However, the mine is a paying proposition, but there is no big money in it at the present time.

MUCH DEVELOPMENT WORK

Teutonic Property Is Being Worked by Harrison and Seaver.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Jan. 23.—Messrs. Harrison and Seaver, who made a big fortune on the W. P. H. of the United Gold Mines company on Ironclad hill several years ago, are now doing considerable development work on the Teutonic property on Bacon hill in close proximity to the scene of their fortune. Work is being carried on on two different levels, but the 300-foot level is where most of the work is being done. So far, nothing has been found in the property, but it is believed that by driving a short crosscut, a good vein can be encountered. The shaft on this property has been sunk to a depth of 600 feet.

MANY CASES HERE

THIS CITY HAS ITS SHARE OF RHEUMATISM.

Simple Home Treatment Gives Prompt Relief and Doesn't Cost Much.

Thousands of men and women, who have felt the sting and torture of this dread disease, which is no respecter of age, persons, sex, color or rank, will be interested to know that while for many years rheumatism was considered an incurable disease, now it is one of the easiest afflictions of the human body to cure. Uric Acid Kidney Pills has proven if not a distinct disease itself, but a symptom, caused by inactive kidneys. Rheumatism is uric acid in the blood and other waste products of the system which should be filtered and strained out in the form of urine. The function of the kidneys is to sift these poisons and acids out and keep the blood clean and pure. The kidneys, however, are of sponge-like substance, the holes or pores of which will sometimes, either from overwork, cold or exposure, become clogged and inactive, and failing in their function of eliminating these poisons from the blood, they remain in the veins, decompose and settling about the joints and muscles, cause the untold suffering and pain of rheumatism and backache, often producing complications of bladder and urinary disease, weakness, etc.

The following simple prescription is said to relieve the worst cases of rheumatism because of its direct action upon the blood and kidneys, relieving, too, the most severe forms of bladder and urinary troubles: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. The ingredients can be had from any good prescription pharmacy, and are absolutely harmless and safe to use at any time.

DANGER SIGNAL FOR WOMEN

From the New York Press.

Women are exercising too much, says a fashionable physician in town, who bids his patients beware of "banting." He says that many women whose waist lines have vanished are trying to turn themselves into sylphs and, instead of exercising moderately, keep at it night and day, no matter how fagged out they feel. "Nature doesn't regard the edicts of fashion, but in she has her way," the physician remarks, "there will be no such physical breakdown as this over exercise will bring." The nobhips fad is responsible for much damage to women's health, he adds.

STOCK PRICES CHANGE

HIGH EARLY IN SESSION AND LOW AT CLOSE.

Effect of Reduction in Official Discount Rates of Bank of England Is Momentary.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The stock market today was sustained and professional operations were not able to make much impression on prices. Dealings in shorts made up a large portion of the total transactions. The reduction in the official discount rates of the Bank of England and the Bank of France was made the occasion for opening prices here on a higher level. The promptitude with which advantage was taken of the advance to make sales for the purpose of realizing profits, was accepted as indicative of the desires of the latest speculative class. But when the professional traders attempted to follow this lead by sales of stocks in continuation of the movement, they found an abatement of the offerings coming on the market and felt obliged to turn again and cover their short contracts. An inference was drawn of strength on the part of the bull party, owing to the subsidence of selling pressure on the decline, but a desire to reduce their holdings at profitable levels was argued from the easiness of the selling in advance. Prices fell back sharply to the lowest at the last. The pause in speculative activity was in harmony with the tenor of news of affairs. The rapid progress towards ease in the money market was unaccompanied by positive evidence of a revival being thus stimulated in trade activity, although improvement in sentiment in various lines of trade was discernible, as it applied to hopes of future revivals. This was true of the iron and steel trade, regarding which, however, the appearance of the United States Steel quarterly report next Tuesday is awaited before forming any definite conclusions on the subject.

The reduction of the Bank of England's official discount rate from 5 to 4 per cent was wider than was anticipated, but the accumulation of reserves to a proportion of 45.9 per cent of liabilities proved the necessity of the step in order to conserve the capital instinct's influence in the open money market, where the new discount rate was still higher than the prevailing open market rate, which also prevailed before the reduction in the bank rate. The acceptance of this example by the Bank of France confirms the universality of the easing tendency of money. It was significant of the trading persistent towards questions of new capital issues, notwithstanding the rapid accumulation of money resources, that suggestions of new loans, even when expected to be already arranged for, caused depression in existing securities of the companies affected. Delaware & Hudson was an example, the seven points decline in that stock being followed by well-founded reports today of the proposed $10,000,000 convertible note issue.

The announcement of a call on the New York banks for Monday of government deposits was passed over as an unimportant incident. The same was true of the advance of foreign exchange towards the gold export points. The hardness of railroads which have reported back our earnings to be embarrassed safely be accepted as a criterion of the general showing to be made by the railways, shown by these few roads to be heavy as to leave a formidable impression of the possible exhibit to be made by more complete figures.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $2,804,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

WHEAT WEAK AT CLOSE

CAUSED BY HEAVY REALIZING SALES LATE IN DAY.

Excellent Demand Had Sustained Strength Earlier—Corn Market Weak; Oats Quiet.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Heavy realizing sales caused a weak finish today in the local wheat market, the May option showing a net loss of 1¼c. Corn was off 5@7c, oats were down ⅛c; provisions were unchanged to 2½c higher.

The wheat market was strong almost all day, but became weak in the last half hour because of an estimate on world shipments from Argentina, indicating material increase in the movement from that country. The strength shown during the greater part of the day was due to an advance of almost 1 penny at Liverpool, an excellent demand for cash wheat, a scarcity of offerings and doubtful reports regarding the condition of the fall-sown crop in the southwest. The market closed weak. May opened a shade lower to a shade higher, at $1.02¼ to $1.02⅝, advanced to $1.03¼ and declined to $1.02⅛, where it closed. Clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 270,000 bushels. Primary receipts were 1,000,000 less than, as compared with the corresponding day of the same day last year.

Clear, cold weather inspired active selling of corn, which resulted in a weak and lower market for the eight days. Local receipts were much less than expected and estimated, but the falling off in the movement was offset by the likelihood that the arrivals for the next few days will be greatly augmented by the cold wave. The market sold and offerings were taken by commission houses. The market closed weak. May opened 1@1¼c lower, at 69⅞ to 69⅞c, sold up to 70⅛c, declined to 69⅝@69¾c, and closed at 69⅞c. Local receipts were 254 cars, with none of extra grade.

Trade in oats was very quiet, and the market was dominated by the corner room of room. May opened ½c lower, at 51c, sold between 50½c and 50¾c, and closed at 50¾c. Local receipts were 168 cars.

Provisions were in the lower market for the first part of the day. The market on grain did not have much bearing on the trade, as good demand for lard and ribs by a local packer. The close was steady, with May pork showing a gain of 12½c, at $16.05; lard was 2½c higher, and ribs 2½@5c higher.

MINIATURE TRAIN IN COURT.

From the New York Sun.

A little equipment consisting of a locomotive pulling two freight cars and running on a track will be exhibited before Judge Adams and a jury in the supreme court sit at Newark today to convince them that it was no negligence on the part of the Lackawanna railroad in a suit brought by Adolphus Koneski to recover $20,000 damages for injuries he received while in the employ of the company.

Koneski lost his right arm as he was climbing out of an ashpit at the Syracuse shops on March 8, 1905. A locomotive, pulling two freight cars, which was passing, ran over him. Koneski got a verdict in a previous suit, which was set aside on the ground that the damages awarded were excessive.

The miniature train will be the exact duplicate of the train that ran over Koneski. A small ashpit, 40 feet long, will be placed under a part of the track, and sawdust will be used as ashes. The cars will be about ten feet long and one will be of the gondola type, the other representing a low-sided open stone car. The engine will be three feet long and an exact duplicate of the original. Expert trainmen will explain the workings of the exhibit.

SHELL ROAD IN GAS

From the New York Sun.

"Step around the corner with me and I'll show you a shell road," said a man who lightens the burden of a life of leisure by discovering queer things in New York.

"A shell game, more likely," responded his companion, with some excuse for his suspicions, as they were in Long Acre square.

But not a hundred yards east of Broadway, opening into a vacant lot on the north side, where a new theater is to be built, is a well-constructed, neatly-kept shell road. Some whimsical fancy of a man who stores things in the lot has prompted him to gather oyster shells from Rector's and Shanley's and use them for the building and upkeep of his little road.

"The hardest job," said the discoverer after showing his find, "is to think of likely possible things for New York and then hunt for them. Certain to land even the most unlikely some old time or other."
